Becoming a State National: An Overview

Chapter 1: Introduction

Introduction

In July of 1779, the Founders of the United States faced a significant challenge: how to distinguish Americans from the various nationalities—Brits, Dutch, Swedes, and others—living in the burgeoning nation. The solution was the 1779 Naturalization Act, a straightforward requirement by which individuals identified themselves as Americans, separating their status from that of British (also known as U.S. Citizens), French, Dutch, and other nationalities present in Colonial America, including Municipal employees (known as citizens of the United States).

Today, we encounter a similar dilemma. Our Federal Subcontractors have promoted their various forms of citizenship, creating false registrations through birth certificates that designate us as British Territorial U.S. Citizens and Municipal "citizens of the United States" without our knowledge or consent. This proliferation of citizenship statuses has created slaves of us without our knowledge or consent.

The Need to Reclaim Our Status

To address this modern issue, we must once again declare our political status as Americans. By doing so, we reaffirm our sovereignty and disentangle ourselves from the convoluted web of citizenships imposed by federal and municipal entities. Reclaiming our status involves returning to the principles set forth in the 1779 Naturalization Act, with necessary updates to fit our contemporary context. In other words, it means living in the private. If we don't begin living in the private we are seen as "needing" the incorporated government once again making us indigents, wards, paupers, employees, citizens to name a few. All of which pay taxes for the privilege of being employed by an incorporated corporation, and for the mere opportunity to have them govern us.

What is a State National?

A State National is an individual who has declared their political status as an American, distinct from any form of U.S. citizenship. This declaration is crucial for maintaining an unincorporated private living. In other words, a self-governing opportunity to forge ahead on our own.

Nationality is inherited as a birthright. It happens automatically the day you are born. In America, we inherit our nationality from our State. We are New Yorkers, Wisconsinites, Californians, and so on. People can change their nationality by many means, but it must be a conscious and voluntary and fully disclosed change to be valid. The standard of evidence needed to change from a birthright American State National to a Municipal citizen of the United States was set on April 14, 1802, by 2 Statute at Large 153, Chapter 28, Subsection 1. This remains the Public Law that pertains to Americans wishing to change their political status to that of Municipal citizens of the United States.

A Few of the “Benefits” of Living as a Private American

Chapter 2: Benefits

First and foremost, this isn't about weighing the pros and cons or listing the benefits of becoming a State National. This discussion transcends a mere analysis of advantages or disadvantages or “benefits”. It touches upon a profound truth that resonates with many Americans: the notion of your birthright being marred by historical injustices. A lineage of exploitation, beginning with your ancestors and extending to yourself, your children and grandchildren, has resulted in a classification that reduces individuals to mere subjects, akin to slaves or indentured servants. To question the merits of reclaiming one’s rightful status is akin to questioning the value of freedom over bondage. This endeavor is about more than escaping an oppressive label—it’s about embracing the freedom that is inherently yours and navigating life autonomously, free from the shackles of laws designed to profit corporations at your expense. Recognizing the importance of clarity, we will explain this matter in simpler terms. For now, we will break it down to how your rights come back.

Tax Exempt

Living as a Private American offers numerous benefits, including greater privacy, control over personal affairs, and financial independence. By stepping outside the conventional system of incorporation, yes, you are incorporated as a U.S. Citizen, you can protect your personal information and assets, reduce your tax burden, and operate with greater freedom. Unincorporated living people are not required to pay taxes as they are “un”incorporated. <https://americansareback.com/revocation-of-election-taxes>

Unincorporated Businesses Can be Tax Exempt

State Nationals are naturally exempt from taxes and because of this their businesses are too. As long as they act in a sole proprietor capacity and are one with their business. Creating an additional entity outside of yourself separates the living man or woman from these exemptions. And, most certainly creating an LLC or an S-Corp, or any other type of business that needs to be registered with the Secretary of State is obviously required to pay taxes for the privilege of utilizing their services.

Land Ownership

State National can actually own land. For example, the borrower of a mortgage is a tenant and never an owner. Once the mortgage is paid off the title returns to a higher estate and it isn't the U.S. Citizen, it's the state. The property then rolls into the state trust. That's because U.S. Citizens are British Territorial citizens and cannot own land in this country. In the British System all land belongs to the Queen and is part of the National Trust. Brits only receive a "privilege" from the Queen called a "title" that allows them the right to live on and develop a parcel of land as a tenant living on real ("real" is a synonym for "royal") estate, so long as they pay the Queen's property taxes, obey all regulations, and generally kow-tow to the Queen. This is exactly what the rest of us fought The War of Independence to be rid of. We, Americans, own our land and soil by survey (metes and bounds, landmarks, cornerstones) and by either land grant or United States Patent. We don't accept land "titles" except to pay off whatever valid interest the title holder has, and then, we revert them to grants and patents, thus removing the land and soil from the British Territorial United States National Trust. Once you pay off your mortgage you get a land patent and pull in the chain of titles and reconvey your property claims to the land and soil.

Debt Elimination

Prosperity Accounts, MOCEE Process, and the Administrative Process

We are entitled to the full, free, and complete return of all assets and property that naturally belong to us, free from all debts and encumbrances. This includes all land patents and titles belonging to our States and People. We are owed the return of our gold, which was illegally confiscated during the 1930s, and our silver, which was extorted under the guise of law via the Emergency Banking Act of 1934. We are also owed the return of all our intellectual property and all associated assets and benefits, along with the absolute and permanent release of all unjust claims upon our bodies and our DNA.

Debt relief exists, but what works well for one person may not work as well for another. It can be a direct process or a personalized approach that suits your unique situation. And, every creditor is different. What may work for one may not work for another. Plus, I've never seen anyone get their mortgage paid for and if that's what you are looking for be wary of places that claim this. We get all of those who have purchased packages from other places that cost them $2,000.00. While we are owed these remedies, they are not always provided promptly. We always recommend you continue making payments and work the process at the same time. If anyone says any different to you BE AWARE because their promises of something working will only come back to haunt you.

To learn more, if you haven't utilized our learning center, then, you should. It's up to you to level up and learn to self-govern. We have packages to get you returned to your birthright. Here is a testimony from a business owner in using the administrative and lien process available to Americans.

“I have a business where I do consulting for people and I allow them to pay me with credit cards. I had someone I did work for and weeks after the work was done, roof work, they had the nerve to do a chargeback. I was not having this. I used the administrative process to protect myself and my business. When a chargeback happens it actually impacts my business as the credit card companies remove the amount claimed from my business checking account. I was very upset about this and decided to use the admin process. Meaning, I sent a letter to the customer about fraud and filed liens against them. Because I could easily prove they had stolen from me I was fearless. I sent 3 letters, followed the timeline, liened them and they were stuck. When they tried to sell their home they had to pay me exactly what I was owed, plus, treble damages and the loss in business. It was awesome. Yeah, I see this as a form of debt relief also. Protecting myself and my business from debts that I don't and shouldn't owe. This was just a free resource I studied and created documents that I would use for my business. I'm learning to be my own counselor at law. I don't use the MOCEE process and am waiting on the prosperity account and vendor accounts to be activated but wanted to share my experience. “

Lawful Banking

Picture the globe with all the familiar banks marked as red dots. Now, imagine a few scattered blue dots representing lawful banks. These blue dots are multiplying and connecting, creating a network of safe and honest banking. Learn more by utilizing the learning center provided above and completing the Your Prosperity Account 101.

Features of Lawful Banking

- Public Law Compliance: Operates under Public Law, ensuring transparency and fairness.
- Actual Assets and Lawful Money: Deals exclusively with tangible assets and lawful money.
- Safe Banking Practices: No usury, blind escrows, or open assignments.
- Carriage Accounting: Honest and straightforward accounting practices.
- No Bail-outs or Bail-ins: Financial stability without relying on government bail-outs or bail-ins.
- Direct Deals with Lawful Persons: Interacts directly with your lawful person, ensuring your financial transactions are secure.
- No Secretive Practices: No secret handshakes or hidden agendas, ensuring a trustworthy banking environment.
- No Private Law Enforcement: Free from the influence of private law enforcers and black-robed hustlers.

The upcoming lawful banks, only published and recorded Americans are eligible for, stand as a hub for a growing network of safe, lawful banking, offering a transparent, asset-backed alternative to traditional financial institutions. By choosing such a bank, you can ensure that your financial transactions are handled with integrity and in accordance with Public Law. These banks are also known as prosperity institutions.

Bonus Items that Americans Begin to Think About

Minimize Risks in Finance

Americans begin thinking differently about the fraud that exists all around them and look for ways to protect their earnings, their savings and their everyday purchases.

1. Maintain a Minimal Bank Account. Keep a small personal or business account for checking and credit card purposes. Send a reminder to your bank CEO each year that your account is exempt for tax purposes and should be denominated in lawful money.
2. Make payments via wire transfer. Minimize using credit cards for every type of purchase. Use cash, wire transfers, and postal money orders as much as you can. You can't do this for everything but begin thinking that the ease of the transaction is the problem. They make it easy to claim access to your accounts, to lay claim over amounts of money they can access during the 3 days it takes to pay a vendor, and they sell your information to governments around the world daily. (we've all agreed to do this for our business in an effort to keep it private in a way that protects us and our clients.)
3. Accept checks and money orders as lawful money by autographing as redeemed using USC 411. You'll learn that payments received are protected. (we do this with all orders as well)
4. Rebut Bank Presumptions. When you correct your status you will send your bank a letter denominating your account as private and your funds as lawful. This helps protect your account from being treated as a public, confiscatable asset.

Bonus Items that Americans Begin to Think About

Minimize Risks in Finance

4. Use Postal Money Orders (PMOs). PMOs are backed by gold and easily exchangeable for any currency. They are portable, secure, and free from confiscation risks. You can use them like cash or restrict their use similar to a check. This is something most people are unaware of. If you are worried about bank seizures and don't have a lot of savings use this process for your savings too.
5. Consider Gold-Backed IRA/401K Options. Transfer your IRA/401K into physical gold that you can keep at home in a safe. This gives you direct control over your savings without relying on a bank.
6. Evaluate Bank Savings vs. Inflation and Confiscation Risks. Personal accounts in commercial banks are subject to confiscation and lose value due to inflation. The small interest gained does not compensate for these risks.
7. Gold IRA/401Ks and PMOs preserve and increase value over time, counteracting inflation and protecting your assets from bank confiscation.
